HELPING KEEP CANADIAN TREASURES IN CANADA

The story is told of a unique rock formation in the Maritimes, to which scientists used to travel to study and do research. One year a group of graduate students arrived from a midwestern American university, also to study the rock formation, but in their own way: they planted explosives in critical locations on the cliff containing the formation, blew it out of its site, and carted it back to the United States.

Removal from Canada of rare books or valuable works of art, of ethnographic or historical or scientific objects, is perhaps less spectacular than the removal of a massive rock formation, but all of these acts result in a loss to our cultural heritage.

The Government of Canada is concerned about "national treasures" leaving the country, and so the Cultural Property Export and Import Act was legislated in 1975 and came into effect last September.

Under the provisions of the Act, objects classed as culturally valuable to Canada would not be permitted to leave the country without collecting institutions and public authorities here having first had the opportunity to purchase them at a fair price. In general, such objects must have been in Canada for thirty-five years prior to the intended export and must be at least fifty years old. (Works of art produced by persons who are still living at the time of the planned export are not included.)

The act categorizes these treasures into seven control groups: objects recovered from the soil or waters of Canada; objects of ethnographic art or ethnography; military objects; objects of decorative art; objects of fine art; scientific or technological objects; and books, records, documents, photographic positives and negatives, and sound recordings. The treasures would not necessarily have to deal specifically with Canada or Canadian subjects; a painting by Rembrandt or an Etruscan vase could be considered just as valuable to the cultural heritage of Canada as a Group of Seven painting or a fine antique vase made in seventeenth century Quebec.

The Act has certain special ramifications for the University, because this institution includes departments certified under the Act as curatorial authorities judged as fit depositories for these national treasures. A Review Board set up through the Act considers the facilities and the staff in departments such as these to determine whether or not they are acceptable. Approved depositories are classed as category A or category B.

The Commonwealth Games finish on Saturday, and life at the University should return to the more august pace to which we are accustomed at this time of year.

Under category A, a depository is designated "indefinitely and for general purposes" for specific classes of objects, meaning that when such an object is sold or donated to that collecting institution, only the object needs to be certified by the Review Board. In other words, a category A depository is professionally equipped and staffed and highly responsible, an ideal place to receive and care for particular kinds of "national treasures." Category B designation is for more modest establishments, either less well equipped professionally for collecting or not primarily concerned with collecting.

Within this University, so far, the University

Archives, the University Library Special Collections, and the Department of Geology have been given category A designation for the specific areas in which they collect (respectively, papers and records, rare books, and minerals and paleontological items). The University Art Gallery and Museum has just applied for designation in several areas by the Review Board, and no doubt other collecting agencies within the University will follow suit.

It should be noted that the University as a whole cannot apply for a blanket designation, because only a few segments of the University actively collect and have appropriate custodial facilities. However, objects that come into the custodial care of designated departments belong not to those departments but to the University, because only the University can hold property.

Designation under the Cultural Property

Export and Import Act means more than an official pat on the back for collecting agencies. Tax incentives in the Act encourage donors to give valuable cultural property to designated rather than undesignated institutions; depending on the value of the gift, a donor may be able to claim up to one hundred percent of his income as a tax deduction in any one year, and have the capital gains tax on his gift waived as well, if it is given to a designated institution. If a culturally valuable article is sold to a designated institution, the capital gains tax on that item is also waived.

If an owner seeks to export a valuable item that falls under the Act, the item is referred to the appropriate collecting institution; if the item is judged by an expert examiner to be valuable to the culture of Canada, the institution is encouraged to buy the item at a fair price. If the institution lacks the funds to do so, rather than let the item be exported, the Government of Canada may make grants available to make the purchase possible; such grants have been made already to various institutions across the country.

C.R. Stelck and D.G.W. Smith, of the Department of Geology, have been designated expert examiners for paleontological articles and minerals, respectively. Similarly, John Charles, Special Collections Librarian with the University Library, has been designated expert examiner for rare books for Alberta and the Northwest Territories. This means if someone in this area seeks a permit to export a rare book or a fossil, or if such an item is stopped at the border by Canada Customs, it might be referred to Dr. Stelck or Mr. Charles for evaluation as to its worth to Canadian culture, broadly defined. According to Mr. Charles, the telling question is: would Garry Robert Van Petten has been appointed Dean of Pharmacy and Pharmaceutical Sciences for a term of 1 August 1978 to 30 June 1983. Dr. Van Petten received his BSc in Pharmacy and his MSc in Physiology-Pharmacy from this University. In 1962 the University of Glasgow awarded him his PhD in Pharmacology. Prior to his appointment, Dr. Van Petten was head of the Division of Pharmacology and Therapeutics and Director of the Medical Vivarium at the Faculty of Medicine at the University of Calgary. In recent years his research interests have focussed on fetal pharmacology. He is the Assistant Science Editor of the Canadian Journal of Pharmaceutical Sciences and the Associate Editor of Pharmacology.

the heritage of Canada be diminished if this item were to leave the country permanently?

If the answer to that question is yes, the gears of the Act will go into motion, and the end results probably will be that the object remains in Canada, that the previous owner of the object has received a fair price and tax benefits as well, and that a collecting agency in Canada—possibly one of the designated agencies in the University—has acquired a valuable addition.

While the Act is certainly no guarantee that all culturally valuable items will remain in Canada, at least it offers a measure of protection that was not there before it came into operation, and it affords collecting authorities such as those in the University the opportunity to acquire such objects, which previously were free to go to the highest bidder.

POWER PLANT TO OPEN SOON

The new Graduate Students' Association social centre is nearing completion. The centre should be in operation during the last two weeks in August, and the official opening is scheduled for mid-September. The centre is located in the North Power Plant Building and will be known as the Power Plant. Remodelling of the building begun in December 1977, and it contains the GSA offices, as well as meeting rooms, a restaurant/lounge, a bar, and games rooms.

Built in 1914-15, the Power Plant is one of the oldest buildings on campus. The building has housed Medicine, the original CKUA radio station, and Electrical Engineering. Research that has been carried on in the building includes early work on the tar sands and ultrasonic waves. A great deal of effort has gone into the preservation of the building's character. The contrast between the sand-blasted brick walls and the pipes transversing the ceiling is effective, and a donation from the Alma Mater Fund has made it possible to enlarge and mount various appropriate archive photographs.

The Power Plant will not only provide an accessible focal point for graduate students, but it should also benefit the entire University population. The facility will be open to the University between the hours of 11 a.m. and 3 p.m., offering food service and a congenial atmosphere. After 3 p.m. the centre will be open only to members and their guests, and the bar will offer beer and wine service and a selection of evening meals.

As well as the graduate membership, there are a limited number of social memberships available. The social membership categories are listed below.

Category A includes graduate alumni who were members of the GSA in the years 1976-77 and/or 1977-78. They may apply for a year's free membership for each of those years they were here.

Category B includes undergraduate and graduate alumni, plus any student who is twenty-one years of age or above.

Category C includes University employees (Academic or Non-Academic). Up to 8 September there will be a reduced fee of $35.

Category D includes sponsored members. Any graduate student or social member can sponsor one person to become an associate social member.

The rates are fixed as follows.

Category B $35 per annum. $6 per session (Spring and Summer).

Categories C and D $45 per annum. $8 per session (Spring and Summer).

The GSA reserves the right to limit the number of social memberships and to alter the fees. For further information, telephone 432-2175.

UKRAINIAN CANADIANS

A Survey of Their Portrayal in English-language Works by Frances Swyripa, examines the evolution of the Ukrainian community in Canadian society.

According to the news release issued by the Institute, "the work commences with an examination of the earliest articles and reports, which are limited to superficial descriptions of picturesque but peculiar peasants in sheepskin coats. Written by Anglo-Celts, the primary concern of these reports was the hasty assimilation of the peasant community into British-Canadian life."

In more recent years, however, this apparently simplistic view of the rôle of Ukrainians and Canadians of Ukrainian descent as members of our nation has altered drastically. With the advent of multiculturalism, research on Ukrainian-Canadians has become a viable field of specialization. "Today," according to the Institute, "Ukrainian-Canadian scholarship exists as a legitimate and accepted discipline."

The author examines in chronological sequence many sources, ranging from government reports and works by churchmen to novels and items of specialized research. The book ends with a bibliography and is supplemented by brief biographies of Ukrainian-Canadian authors.

Frances Swyripa, the author, was born in Lloyminster and received her MA in History at the University of Alberta in 1976. She is currently a Research Associate in the Canadian Institute of Ukrainian Studies.

UNIVERSITY REGISTRAR HONORED

In June of this year, Alexander Duncan Cairns, University Registrar, was honored by the Association of Registrars of the Universities and Colleges of Canada. In recognition of his many years of distinguished service at this University, he was awarded an Honorary Life-Membership in the Association.

Alex Cairns is, in a sense, the Dean of Canadian Registrars. Having served under five of the seven Presidents of this University, Mr. Cairns has participated in the ten-fold growth of the University of Alberta from a predominantly undergraduate provincial institution to its present position as an internationally respected graduate institution. Mr. Cairns will be retiring this fall.

As well as the official aspects of his work at the University, Mr. Cairns has participated in campus life in many other capacities, the most notable of which has been as a cartoonist. Before entering the Faculty of Education in 1938, he considered for a time the possibility of a life as a cartoonist. His cartoons used to appear in the Gateway, and some of the posters that can be seen around the campus, most particularly at registration time, clearly bear the stamp of original Cairn's creations.

OLD RIGOR MORTIS "THERE WILL BE NO EXCEPTIONS"

"Registrars are of all types!" Here is a representation of one particular type by our own Registrar, A.D. Cairns.

PEOPLE

■ Shirley M. Stinson, Professor of Nursing and Health Services Administration, has been chosen as President-elect of the Canadian Nurses' Association. The Association is a federation of the eleven provincial and territorial registered nurses' associations, representing a membership of more than 122,000 registered nurses.

■ Einer Boberg of the Department of Speech Pathology has been awarded a research grant from the Medical Services Research Foundation of Alberta. During the next year, Dr. Boberg and his associates will attempt to adapt a treatment program for adult stutterers to fit the needs of young, retarded stutterers.

■ Charles H. Davis, Dean of the Faculty of Library Science, has been appointed to chair the Canadian Council of Library Schools, the official library education unit of the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada. Dr. Davis will serve a two-year term effective immediately.

■ Fenton V. MacHardy was honored at the recent Agricultural Institute of Canada Conference in Regina by being named a Fellow of the Institute. The fellowship was awarded in recognition of his outstanding contributions to agricultural engineering and agriculture in Alberta, Canada, and various countries around the world.

Dr. MacHardy was head of the Department of Agricultural Engineering from 1957 to 1968 and Dean of Agriculture and Forestry for seven years until 1975. In 1975, he was appointed University Professor in recognition of his eminence both in and beyond his own discipline. He established his international reputation by involvement with a number of projects with IDRC in Nigeria and South East Asia.

■ L.A. Kosinski, Professor of Geography, participated in a seminar on New Conceptual Approaches to Migration in the Context of Urbanization. Organized by the International Union for the Scientific Study of Population, the seminar was held in the Rockefeller Center in Bellagio, Italy.

Film Course to be Offered

Interdisciplinary Studies 300: Introduction to the Study of Film is a full-year credit course which will make its debut at the University in September. The course, to be taught by W. Beard, is offered jointly by the Department of Comparative Literature, Art and Design, Drama, English, Political Science, Romance Languages, and Philosophy.

Two primary aims of the course are to promote awareness of the nature and uses of film language, and to provide an overview of film history from its beginnings to the present. Approximately twenty-five feature-length films from a variety of countries will be screened. Each film will be studied from three perspectives: as a text in film language, as a work of art in its own right, and as a product of its particular time and place in film history.

Lectures will be given on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays. Labs, that is film showings, will occur on Tuesdays and Thursdays. A mid-term exam, an essay of approximately 2,000 words, a final exam, and a number of shorter seminar assignments will be undertaken by students.

Further information on the course is available from Dr. Beard, 4-54 Humanities Centre, telephone 432-5535.

SCULPTURES NEAR COMPLETION

The Festival 78 Sculpture Symposium will be over on 15 July. Pictured on the facing page is the work of Malowian sculptor Berlings Lengani Kuanda.
